1. Bebin, in the Yugoslav shipping office, works closely with Dragila of the Washington Embassy in organizing Yugoslavs in the US.
2. Dragila keeps in touch with the Croates in Chicago and attended their convention in the summer of 1947. He also collaborates with Vukovic (or Vukolic) of the Embassy in Ottawa in contacting Yugoslavs. Vukovic travels in both Canada and the US to contact people. The system being used to organize Yugoslavs in the US includes threats and bullying. Principal efforts are being concentrated on labor unions with Yugoslav members. It was told that many of the Croatians in Chicago are now good Communists.
3. Sabolovic, on the UN delegation in New York, is active in organizing sources of intelligence in the US. He was instructed in Belgrade to organise groups of people in the US and develop sources of intelligence. He was also made responsible for checking on Yugoslav personnel abroad. [REDACTED] a network was to be organized in the US to control Yugoslav nationals and instruct them in the party line.

The course lasts for one year. Most of the graduates go to work in the Foreign Office, two or three go to the Ministry of Foreign Trade, one or two in the Prime Minister's Office, one in the Central Committee of the Communist Party. One of the graduates is now in the Yugoslav Embassy in Canada, and Todorvitch, another graduate, is on the permanent UN delegation. The diplomatic school's director is Cvrlja, Counselor of the Foreign Office. Cvrlja, a former professor of philosophy, is an official in OZNA. [redacted]
